HATHAWAY REPORTS

by Congressman William Hathaway

To reduce crime, we must reduce juvenile delinquency. The recent report of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice, "The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society", indicates that the single, most disturbing aspect of the nation's crime problem is the deep and growing involvement of young people in crime. The cost to the nation of such crime is estimated to be $4 billion annually.

In his testimony before the General Subcommittee on Education, Attorney General Clark said: "While arrests of adults declined 13% in 1966, arrests of juveniles increased 8%. Youths between 11 and 17 comprising 13 percent of the population, were convicted of 50 percent of all burglaries, larceny, and car thefts. Half of all crimes against property were committed by minors. Of all ages, from cradle to grave, our 15-year-olds are arrested most frequently, and the rate drops at every older year."

I was therefore happy that the juvenile delinquency prevention and control act was passed this week by the House. I was also happy that three amendments that I offered on the House Floor were accepted. These amendments attempt to the extent possible, to involve parents or other adults in programs devised to prevent delinquency.

At the time of offering the amendments to the bill I stated that "The family is the most vital and important institution in our society. A child's future is largely determined by the environment created by his family. It is in the family that the child develops his personality, his moral code, and his attitude to social institutions.

Our modern industrial society, however, severely strains the fabric of family unity. Our great mobility frequently separates the child not only from familiar surroundings but from the supervision and care of grandparents and other relatives. The father of this greatly stripped down family is caught in the economic demands of our society. He is forced to be absent most of the time from the home and a child waiting for his father is, in many ways, like a character in a play waiting for Godot.

Our increasing allocation of education, recreation, and work to separate institutions destroys the former unity and cohesion of the family. Rather than a functioning unit, the family has become a divergent collection of autonomous beings. Also our technological achievements like the automobile increases the independence of the adolescent from parental observation. A modern father is divorced from his children.

This weakness of adult control is most obvious under pathological circumstances such as slum neighborhoods or broken homes. For the father in the slums, any lasting help can be achieved only by the elimination of poverty and the securing of meaningful employment. In our society a father who is frequently unemployed lacks authority and unfortunately respect.

My amendments, therefore, will not solve basic problems. For an effective reduction of delinquency there must be a combined effort to create broad changes in the structure of community life and programs beamed more specifically at the immediate causes of delinquency. The juvenile delinquency Prevention Act is a carefully drafted bill to deal with immediate causes of delinquency and I believe that my amendments are consistent with the purposes of this bill.

The amendments provide not only for the possible participation of parents but for other adults who offer guidance to such youths. Frequently a youth's problem is that either one or the other parents missing and this amendment attempts to incorporate into these programs authorized by the bill the active participation of adults who can guide the youth. By these amendments, I hope to incorporate one of the recommendations of the President's commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice.

In the task force report Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime, on page 47, the Commission recommends "Efforts both private and public, should be intensified to develop activities that involve the whole family together."

TO PARENTS OF PRIMARY PUPILS OF S. A. D. #41

During the next school year the pupils in grades one, two, and three will be using a new reading program in addition to the presently used textbooks.

The new program, PHONETIC KEYS TO READING, presents a different approach to the teaching of reading in that it introduces phonetic training at the very beginning of the first grade. This method is based on the assumption that the pupil should have a knowledge of the letters and their sounds before he is introduced to formal reading on pre-primer level. Also, he will learn to apply a few simple yet functional phonetic principles. Thus, at the very outset the first-grade pupil will be given a basis and a means of attacking words independently.

During an eight-week auditory-training period the first-grade pupil learns the long and short sounds of the vowels, sounds of the consonants, and a few blends. His desire to read is satisfied through the use of experience stories and simple reading charts which will enable him to learn basic techniques of reading and to associate meaning with printed words. At the end of the eighth week of school the child then begins actual reading in the pre-primer of PHONETIC KEYS TO READING; and through the use of carefully developed lesson plans in the teacher's manual, he is given the opportunity of sounding out for himself the words that occur in the pre-primer stories. Consequently, he immediately starts making application of his phonetic knowledge.

The parent of the first-grade pupil should not be concerned because of the delay in formal reading at the beginning of school.

PEACE CORPS VOLUNTEERS MEET IN AUGUSTA

Maine's returned Peace Corps volunteers agreed to form a permanent organization following a meeting in Augusta Tuesday with Peace Corps staff members from Washington and Boston.

The meeting was arranged through Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis' Federal-State Coordinator's office.

Miss Carol Santry, director of Community Relations, and Peter Walsh, recruiting director for the Northeast, spoke to the group of 60 volunteers. They described the need for "service councils" staffed by returned volunteers and the formation of these councils in other states.

Miss Santry said that Maine ranked 15th among all states in the per capita number of volunteers supplied to the Peace Corps. In terms of total volunteers, it ranked 34th while the state's population rank is 37th in the nation.

Alan Rubin, chairman of the Maine Partners for the Alliance (a State Department mutual aid project between Maine and the Brazilian state of Rio Grande do Norte) told the session of the recent mission to South America that was led by Gov. Curtis.

He added that the Maine Partners could work closely with the returned Peace Corps volunteers, too.

A possible joint effort, he said, might be the School Partnership program in which local school children raise money for schools to be built overseas as Peace Corps projects.

During the Tuesday meeting area groups were formed from volunteers in the Portland, Augusta-Lewiston and Bangor areas.

The returned volunteers, besides coming from all sections of the state, have worked in all sections of the world, including Tunisia, Morocco, Peru, Thailand, Ethiopia, Nigeria and British Honduras.

While in Augusta Miss Santry and Walsh met with officials of the state's Department of Education, Agriculture and the Sea and Shore Fisheries to seek ways that persons qualified in these fields could be recruited for Peace Corps work.

83RD BIRTHDAY OBSERVED

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Herring entertained Sunday at a family dinner at their home on Water Street.

The occasion was a surprise party for Mrs. Cora Stevens, and 19 relatives gathered to honor her on her 83rd birthday.

Mrs. Stevens is one of those ladies who never counts the years. Active in her own home and church, devoted to her family, she lives life to its fullest.

Guests attending to bring her birthday greetings were Mr. and Mrs. David Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Harmen Harvey and children, Martha, Steven, Michael, Merry Jane, Rebecca and Kathryn from Hallowell, Maine, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Herring of Sangerville, Mrs. Mildie Herring, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Cookson and David Cookson of Guilford.

In order that he may be able to attack words independently and actually learn to read in an independent manner, he must be given a knowledge of the letters and their sounds before he starts reading.

After the pupil has completed the first two books of PHONETIC KEYS TO READING, he will then be able to read well from any series of readers since he will not be held to a small controlled sight vocabulary.

At this point, you, the parent, will be able to recognize the advantages of this program because your child will be able to sound out words for himself and will be able to read on his own. His phonetic knowledge will enhance his spelling ability, too.

Second and third graders will be taught the audio-readiness portion of PHONETIC KEYS TO READING before starting in the books for their respective grades. This basic training in letter sounds and the practice of analyzing words will prepare him for the program of independence in reading that will be developed in grades two and three.

Although reading in the other adopted readers will be withheld for approximately eighteen weeks, the parents should be apprehensive or disturbed, on each grade level, it is very important that the books of PHONETIC KEYS TO READING be taught prior to those of a comparable level in other series, for this sequence allows the pupils to continue in their other readers the independent reading methods which have been taught in the new program.

The chemical used in the spraying affects the potatoes so that after digging they are resistant to spoilage during storage.

Maya is presented each Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Executive producers: King Brothers. Producer: Herbert Coleman. Directed by Coleman, Marvin and Chomsky. Based on the movie of the same name. Filmed entirely in India.

There's a new adventure show this season entitled, Maya, and stars Jay North (TV's former Dennis the Menace), India's Sajid Khan and of course, the elephant Maya. The show deals with Terry Bowen who arrives in India to find that his father is reported dead in a tiger hunt. But Terry believes his father is alive because his body wasn't found. So he starts out to find his father and instead meets Raji and his pet elephant, Maya. The three start out to find Terry's father.

Jay North is famous in American television for his part as Dennis the Menace. After the show stopped back in the early '60s, Jay made several guest appearances on My Three Sons, Red Skelton, Ed Sullivan and Desi Lu Playhouse. He also made several motion pictures including The Big Operator and Maya. When Maya was bought by NBC back in July of '66, Jay, being the star in the movie, was asked to star in the TV show. When not in India filming Maya, Jay lives with his mother in Studio City, Calif.

Sajid Khan made his debut in films at the age of three: He became the star of India's all-time box office hit movie, Mother India. He starred in other India films then got the role of Raji in the movie, Maya. He will also play the role of Raji in the TV show.

The acting by both boys in this series is really great. Both boys make this show great for kids and interesting for adults.

This lovely Easter Lily was found blooming this week in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Don Peters on Kimball street in Milo. Mrs. Peters reports that she expected blossoms about the 1st of September and that 2 or 3 blooms are good. Apparently this bulb has been working overtime as it has 5 blooms now and more are ready to come out.

Mrs. Peters plans to take the bulb up and dry it through the winter planting it again in the spring.

WEMT-TV, Channel 7 of Bangor sponsored an automobile tour of Bangor citizens last week-end, travelling into Dover-Foxcroft, Guilford, Greenville and Lily Bay.

The "Foliage Tour" served the two-fold purpose of providing a conducted trip to areas having the most beautiful fall leaves and providing Channel 7 cameramen with hundreds of feet of color film for their viewing audience.

Matt Troy would like to take this opportunity to express his thanks to station manager Mr. Frank Lockie for their help and cooperation during the tour.

Perhaps folks living in this area will "take a second look outside" in appreciation of natural beauty that brings tours from the city to our towns.
